In a not so far away place, called Abundance Valley, filled with opulent mansions and castles, lived a bunch of crazy, flamboyant animals...

They were very wealthy, very abundant, and loved to throw extravagant parties – so they celebrated whenever they got the chance.
They ate, drank, danced, and played games all of the time, doing it so often, they sometimes forgot what they were celebrating.

But it didn’t matter, because they were so busy having fun and being merry, that they didn’t even notice... Or so they thought.
Every time they arranged a jamboree, they had to make it bigger, better, and crazier than the last, so that no one would be bored. But this was making many of the animals hard to please. They always had to have more, do more, eat more and drink more. One day Lady Scarlet looked around at all of the mindless partying and had a realization...
Nobody at the party was truly having fun, and if things went on like this forever, no one would ever remember what it was truly like to be happy.

For the first time in a long while, Lady Scarlet took off her mask – but the bright lights and constant noise was too much to handle.
Lady Scarlet went outside to breathe in the fresh air. The sky was beautiful, the grass was so soft on her paws, which had been cramped up in her fancy shoes for nights on end.

She could hear birds singing, and smell delicious apple blossoms on the branches waving in the cool breeze. She realized what she’d been missing...
And so did every one else...
